A BEWITCHED FAMILY.

The Remarkable Event That Transpired in a Michigan Town.

Flint, Mich., Aug. 3.—Much excitement has been created in this community by the queer doings of a family by the name of Whitney, living in the township of Mount Morris, eight miles north of this city, who are laboring under a strange hallucination, and imagine they are the victims of witchcraft. From the many conflicting stories that are told, your correspondent has sifted out from the stacks of chief the grains of truth herewith presented. Until recently, two families, brothers-in-law by the name of Clark and Sumner, lived in a small double house on a farm in the township of Viena. Clark's family consisted of a wife and three children, and Sumner's of a wife and one child. They lived on the best of terms until about two months ago, when a 2-year-old child of Clark's was taken sick with a serious illness, which resulted fatally July 1. After the child was buried the families claim to have heard strange noises about the house at night, such as the buzzing of a swarm of bees and the retching of a person in the act of vomiting. Then the cry of "murder" would break on the night air. A short time ensued, when Mrs. Sumner and another child of Clark's were seized with the same mysterious illness, and the strange noises continuing, they became frightened, and both families moved to the homes of the wives' mothers, Mrs. Whitney, in the township of Mount Morris. The next night after their arrival they claim to have heard similar noises, also bleating of sheep and the neighing of a horse.

The second night they say the noises continued, and were accompanied by a peculiar stench resembling burning flesh. This part of the story seems probable, from the fact that fifteen beings were huddled together in a house 16 by 22 feet, in a wretched condition of squalor and nastiness. In a day or two, two more of Clark's children were stricken with a similar illness, and bedlam reigned supreme. Impressed with the idea that they were bewitched, Whitney and Clark got two old muskets and commenced firing through the windows to drive away the witches. This continued for two nights, when the neighbors, becoming frightened at the strange performances, informed the officers, who proceeded to investigate the affair. The officers were resisted by Clark and Whitney, and threatened with death if they approached, but, after considerable parleying, they suffered the officers to escort them to Flint, but no admission to the house was permitted. A student prosecuting Johnson, with a posse of officers, visited the place on Tuesday last, and were met by Dr. J. D. Fisher, of Ohio, whose clothes were saturated with blood from a wound received from the hands of one of the half-crazy women, who resisted his entrance. The doctor said he had visited the house to see if he could be of service to them, and was stoned by Mrs. Livingston, a daughter of Mrs. Whitney, in the breast. Two physicians were summoned and the doctor's wound was dressed, when it was found the knife had penetrated the breastbone and thus saved a dangerous or fatal result. Three of the inmates were arrested and lodged in jail.

Saturday afternoon eight more of the bewitched or bedeviled families were arrested as disorderly persons, brought to this city and lodged in jail. The rest fled and escaped the officers. Some of them had cut off the ends of their fingers and toes, slit the ears of their cattle, etc., to use the blood to drive away the witches. When found, Mrs. Sumner was entirely naked. The authorities are at a loss to know what to do with this strange mess. They found the premises in terrible confusion. The glass in the windows is nearly all broken out by firing money and other things through them or drive off the witches, and the filth and wreckage is beyond description. It is hoped and trusted the bars of the jail will keep out the evil spirits and they may recover their equilibrium.

A Paris paper contains the following advertisement: "Found, on Sunday last, a lace mitten, embroidered with pearls. If the person who lost it will be kind enough to leave the other one at the office of this paper, she will greatly oblige the person who found the first!"

According to the New York Tribune young girls fan themselves rapidly in church as if to say, "I'll catch him, I'll catch him, I'll catch him," while matrons are more calm about it, and teach their fans to softly murmur, "I've got him, I've got him, I've got him," while fans in the hands of widows tell the sad, sad story as plainly as possible, "I've lost him, I've lost him, I've lost him."

General Sheridan's Hat.

It is only natural that great Generals who commanded thousands of men in the late war should frequently meet men in different parts of the country who cherish some incident of war life with which the General and they were closely connected. It is doubtful if General Phil Sheridan, whose famous twenty-mile ride to Winchester has made his name familiar to every household, ever met a man who brought up a pleasant reminiscence than a brown-faced, hardy miner did in this city.

General Sheridan was idly sauntering up and down the lobby of the Windsor Hotel, deep in thought and complacently puffing at his Havana and blowing the smoke into pretty little rings. Suddenly a rough-looking man, with face as heavily bearded that one could see nothing but the twinkling black eyes, approaching him and raising his hat with awkward embarrassment, said:

"Good morning, General!"

The hero of Winchester returned the greeting, touching his hat with military politeness, and then trying to peer through the miner's heavy beard to get a glimpse of his features, the General added:

"I'm afraid I've forgotten your face, sir."

The eyes of the man from Gunnison twinkled brighter than ever as he remarked:

"It's not unlikely, General; even if we never met but once before, you wouldn't be so apt to remember me as I am you. It's seventeen years since I saw you last. Things have changed since then. It was on the battle-field of Cedar Creek. Don't you remember the soldier that gave you his horse when yours was shot from under you by a shower of canister from the masked battery on the brow of the hill?" and the old man looked up with eager pride into the General's face.

"That I do," answered the General, with pleased interest and a bright flash in his eye, "I remember it well."

"I was that soldier," continued the miner, proudly. "I remember the circumstance well, sir. When you put your spurs to my horse and galloped off, you left your hat behind you, and I called to you as loud as I could, but you replied, 'Never mind the hat, my boy.' I've got that hat yet, General. It's hanging in my cabin in the mountain," and the rough old fellow's eyes shined with pleasure.

Sheridan grasped his hand and led him to seat, and for half an hour they fought the battle of Cedar Creek over again. — [Denver Tribune.]

An Unblemished Complexion

Is, like a sweet voice, "an excellent thing in woman." Where it does not exist naturally, it may be imparted by artificial means. "GLENN'S SCULPHUR SOAP" removes all the unpleasant effects of dust and perspiration, obliterating blotches, tan, and all other discolorations of the skin; more than this, it gives a healthy tint to the cheeks, and a lustrous whiteness and smoothness to the neck and arms. It is the fashionable cosmetic at the watering places, and as scientific vouchers for its harmlessness, no lady need be afraid to use it. Beware of counterfeits. See that "C. N. CARTER, Proprietor," is printed on each packet, without which none is genuine. Sold by all druggists at 25 cents; three cakes, 60 cents. A fitting toilet accompaniment is "HILL'S INSTANTANEOUS HAIR DYE," which changes gray or any obnoxious color to a beautiful black or brown in the space of a few minutes, and contains no mineral poison.
